Congress Split on Draft Issue

Solons Not Quite Ready, Line Up in 3 Groups on Truman Proposal.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 — An uncertain congress held up a moistened fingers for the winds of public reaction today before tackling President Truman's universal military training program.

Brought up short against a problem many aren't ready to meet, legislators appeared to be separating into these three groups:

1. Those willing to approve lock, stock and barrel, Mr. Truman's proposal that a year's training be given all physically able young men while they are between the ages of 17 and 20. This appeared to be a minority group.

2. Those who want a modified training program which won't interrupt young America's education. This seemed to take in the great body of middle-roaders.

3. Those who oppose any form of compulsion, think volunteer military training will meet the nation's needs. They form another minority group.

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley (Ky) said he didn't know when any action might be taken. Neither house nor senate military committees made any move.

Truman Firm

White House advisers were quoted at second hand as having said Mr. Truman had decided to take his stand and let the political chips fall where they may.

The President was represented as wanting no compromise of his proposal that every young man be tagged for a year of government instruction, except those physically unfit.

Capitol Hill's general interpretation was that Mr. Truman had decided power is going to do most of the talking in world affairs after conversations with Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Secretary of State Byrnes, just back from the disappointing five-power conference of foreign ministers in London.

Rep. Martin (Mass), the house Republican leader, issued a statement saying that before adopting compulsory military training the government should "seek an international agreement to abolish peacetime conscription as a policy among nations."

However, many house Republicans said they thought Mr. Truman had made a case.

May Be Expensive

Senator George (D-Ga) said the country is going to have military training, the President's program looks about as sensible as any. He warned, however, it may be pretty expensive.

But Senator Langer (Rep., N. D.) called Mr. Truman's proposal "a bad, bad, bad,

Presidents Drill Hard For Ashland Battle Tomorrow

Injuries Riddle Squad on Eve of Game on Field of Old N.C.O. Foe.

Thursday evening the Harding Presidents will journey to Ashland, still looking for that first victory of the season. The contest was scheduled for Thursday due to the fact there will be a teachers' conference on Friday. The battle with the A's will bring back memories to the fans and to some of the Prexies of the rivalries between these two schools when both were in the N. C. O. league which dissolved at the close of the last basketball season. Harding may stand a pretty fair chance with their hosts as the A's have compiled a record of four losses, one victory and one tie thus far this year. Last week Ashland was held to a scoreless tie by Wooster.

Injuries are still hampering the Presidents. They have been faced with several new ones in addition to the others. Dick Taylor and Dave Lee, both starters, have acquired injuries this week which may put them on the shelf for Thursday night's tilt. Dick has a sore leg and Dave is being troubled with some bruised ribs. Bob Ralston, who started at tackle last Friday, has a couple of very badly bruised ribs and an X-ray is going to be taken to see if they might possibly be cracked. Charles Cline's ankle was X-rayed last night and found not broken. Jim Rea, quarterback and halfback, has a very sore charleyhorse and it is doubted that he will see any action Thursday. In addition to these, several of the replacements are nursing minor injuries.

Coaches Petrich, Wiley and Neimi have been drilling the boys especially on blocking and tackling this week. The lack of these two necessities was very noticeable in Harding's 13-6 defeat at the hands of the Findlay Trojans last week.

Now that the Prexies have a crew of three coaches, it is expected to help in that they are able to concentrate on one department more than was possible before.

It is rather late for that now in that there are but four games remaining on the Harding schedule for the season, but it may help to reduce the injuries.

Thursday night's game at Ashland will get under way at 7:30.

Top OSU Swimmer Heads for Hawaiian Home – with Honors

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 24—Keo Nakama, a little Hawaiian who wanted to be a baseball player but turned out to be one of the nation's top swimmers, headed for his home islands today, his competitive swimming career ended, but carrying a batful of Big Ten, NCAA and National AAU championships.

Keo, a modest 23-year-old 135-pounder described by his Ohio State university coach, Mike Peppe, as "the greatest mile swimmer in the history of the game," left here by plane at 1 a. m. He will take a boat from San Francisco and then, back in Hawaii for the first time in more than four years, will become baseball and swimming coach at Honolulu's Farrington High school. When the island post-war athletic program is complete he's scheduled to become coordinator of swimming.

As such, he said yesterday "I sure hope I can bring a team to the states."

When Keo finished up his competitive swimming career in the men's National AAU meet at Akron last summer he had six Big Ten crowns to his credit, four National Collegiate athletic titles and nine national AAU championships.

And that from a fellow who says he started swimming in competition just because he wanted to see Honolulu. He lived on Maui and he had never been to Honolulu until he went as a swimmer back in 1937 when he was only 17. He whipped Ralph Gilman, one of America's better swimmers, in a 500-yard event and from then his career was swimming instead of baseball.

CHARLIE TRIPPI, former star football players at the University of Georgia, is out of the service and back with the Bulldogs—amid plenty of criticism which followed his release. Charges were made that pressure was exerted on the War department to get Trippi's release. Trippi is shown above at Clearwater, Fla., with his wife and seven-month-old daughter after his release. As a soph in 1943, Trippi was the star of Georgia's 9-0 Rose Bowl victory over University of California at Los Angeles. One sports writer recently commented that if Trippi doesn't do any better than he did last Saturday (L. S. U. 32-Georgia 0) it will take him longer to get 41 points in football than it did in the Army. (International Soundphoto)

Steve Nemeff, winner over Sgt. Billy Fox last week will return to the Marion Armory Thursday to meet Johnny LaRue in one of the double main events. LaRue has been with the army as an instructor and now is returning to his favorite sport of wrestling. The other main event has all the earmarks of producing plenty of action for Ace Freeman, the Bronx Jewish grappler, has signed to meet the rough Red Dawson of the shaved head and red beard. Ace has been headlining shows in Toledo.

State "Junior Jail" for Tougher Youths Proposed by Reams

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 24—Welfare Director Frazier Reams proposed today creating a "junior jail" for tough boys now mingling with younger and more redeemable fellows at the Boys' Industrial school at Lancaster.

The present school, he told reporters, could be kept as a sort of "Boys' State or Boys' Town" for youths who could be rehabilitated through moral suasion and by giving them some responsibility for the conditions under which they lived.

Sees Bad Situation

"As it is now," he said, "more or less mature boys of 17 or so are there, some of them already on the way to becoming hardened criminals but too young for sending to the Mansfield reformatory. They are not fit company for the kids who may have made some mistakes but can be turned into good citizens quickly."

Reams said that some institution "with a fence around it and easy to police" was needed for boys who showed that they could not be trusted with any degree of self-direction. Prospect of return to the school type of institution could be held out as a reward for good behavior, he explained.

Earlier this week, Leonard W. Mayo, dean of the Western Reserve university School of Applied Social Science and president of the Child Welfare League of America, called the B.I.S. "one of the most scandalous examples of poorly operated institutions in the United States."

Cites Improvement

While Reams did not comment directly on Mayo's assertion, he said conditions of the school had improved considerably this year under Ralph W. Alvis, acting superintendent pending the return of Harold Hayes from the Army.

"We're still trying to work things out to a better system," Reams said.

Reams added, however, that he had not worked out any concrete proposal for presentation to the legislature or Gov. Lausche.

Snatches of Sports

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—Don't be surprised if the Notre Dame coaching exodus which began last year continues after the current football season...The Irish don't figure to be beaten by any rivals except the Army and Navy, so it won't be a case of firing a losing coach, but some insiders figure Hughie Devore will be looking for a new job for '46...Frank Leahy is expected out of the Navy and back to take charge at South Bend before then....Sam Taub, who can mangle the English language even more artistically than can Harry Balough, celebrated his return to the ringside mike Monday by announcing—"Moore is fighting in a sort of crouch, managed by Jimmy Johnson!"

Rubbing It In

Jack LaVelle, the grid scout was consoling rotund Steve Owen for the Giants' dismal defeat Sunday ..."If you think you had a bad time," said Jack, "think of those boys from the Melville PT boat team...They had a tough time against Army and were tired out ...If anyone had been hurt, they wouldn't even had a place to send him to because the base was closed down a few days before.. Late in the game they were trailing 55-13 when some fellows down front toot a few notes on a trumpet and 2,500 Cadets stand up and shout 'fight.'"

It Gets Gabby

Gabby Street, who didn't learn his nickname by remaining silent, says he never dreamed there could be a job quite like broadcasting baseball .. and getting paid for it ."They won't even let you touch the mike," Gabby says. "The engineers set it up and all you have to do is sit down and describe the game..Of course, a guy gets tired sometimes, because you have to manage both clubs when you're broadcasting a game."

Chandler Faces New Headache As Brooklyn Farm Signs Negro

Colored Club Protests Rickey's Raid of Their Preserves in Jackie Robinson Case.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—Senator A. B. "Happy" Chandler, who hasn't been getting along too happily, anyway, since he undertook to fill the late Judge Landis' shoes as baseball commissioner, can thank Branch Rickey Sr. for his latest prospective headache.

Threatening to camp on the senator's doorstep today were the owners of the Kansas City Monarchs, Negro professional baseball team, whose star shortstop, Jackie Robinson, was signed by Rickey last night to a contract with the Brooklyn farm club at Montreal.

"We won't take it lying down," declared co-owner T. Y. Baird of the Monarchs. "Robinson signed a contract with us last year and I feel that he is our property. If Chandler lets Montreal and Brooklyn get by with this he's really starting a mess."

This probably was the first inkling Chandler had that his new job would call for him to act as adjudicator between the Negro leagues, now threatened with wholesale raiding by Rickey, and the teams of organized white baseball which hired him.

It was a moot question whether the commissioner would be available to the aggrieved Negro owners as a court to which they could carry their complaints, or whether his duties merely called for policing his own organization.

It had been generally felt that the signing of the first Negro to a contract in organized ball would be universally hailed by Negro baseball as the long-sought opening wedge into the big league. Baird's beef was, therefore, a considerable surprise.

President Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators declared:

"That is a well established league, and organized baseball shouldn't take their players."

For the most part owners and league officials preferred not to comment last night, but those who did almost unanimously said the graceful thing.

President Frank Shaughnessy of the International league said that "as long as any fellow's the right type and can make good and can get along with other players, we can play ball."

Minnesota's Title Hopes Hinge on Ohio State Game Saturday

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—That old line about "Stagg fears Purdue" was being altered today in Western conference circles.

Minnesota's Gophers were doing the worrying.

Although they don't meet Purdue in Western conference play this year, they figure they'll tie for first place with the Boilermakers.

Purdue' unheralded in pre-season prognostications, already has won three games. Minnesota had little trouble in winning its only conference start, 30-7, from Northwestern.

Face Hard Row

Now the two are sitting atop the league, with each carrying a six-game conference schedule.

Minnesota, unbeaten this season, still must meet Ohio State Saturday, and then Michigan, Indiana, Iowa and Wisconsin. Purdue has a tough and unpredictable Northwestern team at Evanston Saturday, and then games at Michigan and Indiana, in addition to a home game with Pittsburgh.

Minnesota this week is polishing up its running attack in preparation for Ohio State. In yesterday's workout, they spent most of their time on polishing their running attack, while Ohio State worked on every phase of its offensive game.

State Makes Shifts

Ohio State coach, Carroll Widdoes, says draw your own conclusions about the starting lineup against Minnesota at Minneapolis Saturday—he's not making any announcements yet.

A first team backfield foursome that included Robin Priday at quarterback, Alex Verdova at right halfback, Ollie Cline at fullback, and Jerry Krall alternating with Harold Daugherty at left half.

Right halfback Dick Fisher, who reinjured his leg in the Purdue game, not taking part in rough work.

Purdue Star Named Lineman of the Week

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—Tom Hughes, Purdue tackle, today gained the Associated Press award as "Lineman of the Week."

The St. Louis 220-pound, 6' 1" lineman led the Boilermakers to their unexpected 35 to 13 triumph over the previously unbeaten and untied Ohio State Buckeyes.

Harold Harrison, who covered the game for The Associated Press, reports Hughes was the "outstanding lineman of the game from the moment he recovered Ollie Cline's fumble in the opening stages of the first period. He also kicked three extra points and blocked an Ohio punt that gave Purdue a safety. He was the No. 1 man in a modified trap play that took Ohio's guards out of the play time after time to let Ed Cody rip through for tremendous gains."

MOST VALUABLE IN AA

By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 24—Outfielder Stan Wentzel of Indianapolis was named the most valuable player in the American Association for 1945 in a poll of sportswriters, The Sporting News, national baseball weekly announced today.

Wentzel, who goes to the Boston Braves next season, hit .321 and batted in 193 runs for the Indians last summer.

No Agreement Seen in GMC Parley

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Oct. 24—Automobile workers in General Motors' vast industrial empire cast strike ballots today, and it was considered certain, even by corporation officials, that the more than 300,000 GM employes would favor a work stoppage to enforce their 30 per cent wage increase demands.

As the workers voted in the CIO United Automobile Workers' "test case," General Motors officials and the union resumed their wage conference, but they were far from reaching any agreement.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, said corporation officials maintained an "attitude of complete indifference" and read newspapers and magazines while negotiations were under way.

Reuther identified the official as Harry B. Coen, in charge of GM labor relations. There were no replies to Reuther's charges from the corporation or Coen.

Emphasizing a strike would not necessarily follow the election, Reuther said a walkout would not be called "until every human effort has been made to settle this thing across the conference table."

Outcome of the vote will be announced by the National Labor Relations board but not before tomorrow afternoon at the earliest.

The strike vote was taken in union halls and other places because General Motors refused to allow it to be held on company property.

Hollywood Leaders Put Case Up to AFL

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Oct. 24 — The 33-week old Hollywood movie strike comes under consideration of the American Federation of Labor's executive council today with Eric Johnston, chief of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, and Donald Nelson, Independent Producers' representative, here as spokesmen for the industry.

Neither Johnston nor Nelson would comment on his appearance before the council but Richard Walsh, president of the International Association of Theatrical and Stage Employes (AFL), whose union is involved in a jurisdictional dispute with non-AFL groups at the movie capital, said he was "optimistic about the outcome."

Herbert Sorrell, spokesman for the factions opposing Walsh, recently declared, "he would close down all the studios in a week and end the conflict faster than those men in Cincinnati."

PROF. WM. C. CRAIG ON ROTARY PROGRAM

Wooster Professor Speaks at Club's Ladies' Night Party.

Prof William C. Craig of the speech department of Wooster college at Wooster, O., was guest speaker at a ladies' night dinner given Tuesday night at Hotel Harding by the Marion Rotary club. His subject was "Embarrassing Moments."

Prof Craig began his talk by relating a story about a small boy who received a new bicycle for his birthday. The boy immediately rode the bike around the block and when he passed his mother yelled, "Hey Mom! Look, no hands!" He rode around again and then shouted, "Hey look Mom! No feet!" Again the boy rode around the block but this time he shouted, "Look Mom! No teeth!"

Prof. Craig said he was qualified in speaking on "Embarrassing Moments" because he had spent most of his life "behind a blush." He gave the definition of tact as "being able to say the right thing at the right time and in the right way." He said Webster's dictionary gives the definition of embarrassment by saying it may result from three things: mortification and humiliation, financial insufficiency, and confusion of the mind. He illustrated each of these three conditions with amusing stories.

Prof Craig said he became interested in people's embarrassing moments while in high school and has continued to study and gather material on the subject. He concluded his talk by saying that though our nation had many embarassing moments during its earlier years, we overcame them and should avoid others in the future and help build a better world in which peace would prevail.

Professor Craig was introduced to his audience by Alfred Donithen, Rotary program chairman.

Other guests besides the wives of the Rotarians were John E. Webster, Mrs. Betty Mautz Nelil, Mr. and Mrs. Harland Clark, Miss Jacqueline Williams, Harold Stepleton, Mrs. Herman Truman, Mrs. Fred Haybeck, Miss Peggy Smith, Mrs. Alice Bower, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Zaugg of Bowling Green were guests of honor. Mr Zaugg is governor of the 157th district of Rotary International.

Margaret Burke was this week's student reporter representing the journalism classes of Harding High school, assigned to attend the Rotary dinnere.

Arrangements for the party were in charge of a committee composed of Donald E. Sloan, O. C. Alspach, Don A. Howard and Leroy W. Clauer.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

INSTINCTIVELY I knew what Georges was handing me, and my heart leaped with triumph at the knowledge.

But long experience with the various devices to get his own way employed by the glamorous royal philanderer, made me wary.

"To Mary?" I said uncertainly. "But I thought everything was finished—"

"Please unwrap the photograph," he said, "and you will see what I mean."

Fingers Trembling

I was conscious that my fingers were trembling as I unwrapped the small photograph. Then I caught my breath as the lovely pictured face of Mary in her early girlhood came into my vision, and I saw, what I could not avoid seeing, the words written underneath.

"To dearest Georges with all my love. Forever, Mary."

I looked from the photograph to Georges so quickly that I caught him without the grieved expression in his eyes which I knew he considered fitting for this renunciation scene. Instead, there was boyish gratification in having "put something over," and he translated his feeling into words, even as his eyes grew appropriately dolorous.

Theatrical Photograph

"You didn't dream I had this, neither did Mary, when I begged her for that theatrical photograph of her," he said. "And while we're about it, you might as well have that, too. Then dear Noel won't have any more nightmares."

He shifted his topcoat, and took from it the theatrical photograph which Mary had given him, and which Noel believed had been taken from him. It was still in its envelope, and mechanically I took it from him and slipped into the envelope the smaller photograph which held so much emotional dynamite.

"Why give this small photograph to Mary if she does not know you have it?" I asked.

The question was purely mechanical, an instinctive effort to camouflage the struggle my ego was having with my better feelings. I longed so earnestly to wipe the cocky, assured smile from his lips with the revelation that I had been sure he had the photograph and had made plans to get it from him without his knowledge.

Better Nature Prevailed

But my "better nature" prevailed. After all, his action had solved a delicate and difficult problem. Let him have his petty triumph, I told myself sardonically.

"Well, after all, it belongs to her," he said reasonably. "I don't feel at liberty to destroy it, and I don't fancy you do."

"Of course not," I said indignantly, and he spread his hands with an expressive gesture, while an indulgent smile for feminine vagaries curved his lips.

"Well there you are!" he said. "There's nothing else to do with it. Besides, I want her to have both these photographs as a proof that the message I'm sending her is genuine."

Searching Look

He stopped, and looked at me searchingly.

"Will you give her a message from me?" he asked.

I hesitated for the fraction of a second.

"Yes, if it does not call for a message back," I said, and his eyes twinkled.

"Who, looking at you, would dream your heart was made of stone?" he queried rhetorically. "But, as it happens, my message does not call for a reply."

"Then I will give it to her gladly," I said, "What is it?"

"There really are two," he said, "but the first is the more important. Tell her I have taken the last advice she gave me, and it has turned out miraculously. I shall thank her all my life for it."

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN BUNDESEN, M. D.

Ameba Causes Illness

MOST people know what dysentery is. Many think it is the polite name for just plain every-day diarrhea. But what many do not know is that dysentery includes a variety of diseases that produce diarrhea. Among these is amebiasis.

However, the term "amebiasis" includes all of the various conditions which are produced by the organism called the Endamoeba histolytica when it gets into the human body. There may be mild infections in which there are only digestive upsets.

There are more severe cases in which there is prolonged diarrhea, and there are other cases in which complications develop when the parasite gets into the liver, lungs, brain, skin or other organs.

The most frequent complications of amebiasis is probably the formation of abscesses in the liver. Abscess of the liver usually occurs after attacks of diarrhea, but may occur in patients who have never had such attacks. Abscesses in the lung, brain, spleen and other organs caused by the ameba have also been frequently noted.

Sometimes an ulcer caused by the ameba in the intestine may cause the bowel to break open producing a severe infection of the lining membrane of the abdomen called peritonitis.

Amebiasis is treated with a variety of drugs. One of those employed is emetine. This drug has been found helpful in controlling the symptoms of amebic dysentery but does not eliminate the infection, according to Doctor Juan Arosemena of New Orleans. If emetine is used over a prolonged period of time, it may cause some damage to the heart muscle.

After taking the drug, sickness to the stomach and vomiting may occur. Thus, emetine must be carefully used if at all; other preparations may be found to work better and be less dangerous.

Other drugs employed are preparations containing iodine which seem to have a direct effect in killing the ameba and eliminating the parasite. Furthermore, these drugs do not seem to have the toxic effect of emetine.

Drugs containing arsenic are also employed. Of course, all drugs must be used with care in order to prevent arsenical poisoning.

One of the sulfonamide preparations known as sulfasuxidine has also been used in certain patients with good results.

The iodine-containing preparations cannot be used in patients who are sensitive to iodine of who have disease of the thyroid gland. The arsenic preparations cannot be used when there is kidney or liver disease present.

A diagnosis of amebiasis can usually be made on the basis of the symptoms and finding of the parasites in the bowel movements. Once a daignosis is made, the physician will decide which type of treatment can be employed most successfully.

Closing Days on Corregidor

patient in the hospital." I considered—and still consider—this a truly great act of heroism. She knew as well as I that she was signing her captivity warrant.

Under Increasing Attack

After the submarine submerged and left, the heat was turned on us beyond all description. Without let-up we were shelled and bombed, especially along the northern side of the island which faced Bataan's guns. One defending gun after another was smashed, as were all of the searchlights we were depending upon to illuminate the inevitable landing forces.

The Flag was hit again, near the end, and as was the case when it suffered an earlier blow on Corregidor, men leaped from cover to restore it to the top of its towering 100-foot pole.

This time however, the fallen Flag could not be run up from the ground. One of the four men who came to its aid—they had to dodge not only through intense shelling but also were attacked by three dive-bombers—climbed to the top of the swaying pole to fix the halyard.

Four Get Silver Stars

The four brave men involved were Capt. Arthur E. Huff, in charge of an antiaircraft battery, Corp. Louis A. Roark, Pfc. Roy O. Bailey and Pvt. Harley H. Laird. I awarded Silver Stars to them in the course of many last-minute decorations and citations to some of the most gallant fighting men and combat units the world has ever seen.

It did not seem possible that the tempo of the Jap shelling could possibly be increased. But on May 4 it reached its all-time high during a five-hour period from 7 a. m. until noon.

Major Gen. George F. Moore and I, making a careful check of that overwhelming artillery assault, discovered that the Jap batteries hit Corregidor with a 500-pound, 240 mm. shell every five seconds during the five-hour period. The big shells whined in and struck us amid a shower of men, guns, dirt, rock and debris with clock-like precision. They fell at the steady rate of 12 every minute, which meant 3,600 shells for the five hours, enough to fill 600 trucks.

Five Incredible Hours

Moore and I, delving further into the mathematics of the fury, estimated at the end of the five incredible hours that the Japs had hit The Rock with 1,800,000 pounds of shells. These were statistics which ignored the other beatings we took that day of May 4, 1942, for we also had 13 air raids that day.

Gen. George C. Marshall had radioed me from Washington the day before, asking for a frank estimate of the situation in the Philippines. I replied:

"Hostile air corps has bombed Corregidor relentlessly since 24 March. Enemy immediately emplaced artillery on South shore of peninsula following the fall of Bataan on April 9 and since then has subjected our defenses to artillery fire.

"Beginning April 29—the Emperor's Birthday—hostile artillery fire increased in intensity and has continued at that tempo to the present. The hostile bombing has been relatively ineffective but artillery fire from large caliber guns—240 mm.—has destroyed a large percentage of coast and beach defense artillery and small arms. Since April 9 continued bombardment has caused about six hundred casualties and has lowered the morale of troops. Difficult to maintain morale at best because troops have been under or subject to artillery or air attack constantly since December 29 and have received half of poorly-balanced ration since Jan. 8. Morale, however, is amazingly good considering conditions under which troops are presently operating. Persistent reports from operatives indicate that enemy plans to launch assault against Corregidor. He has prepared a large number of motor boats with mounted weapons and constructed large number of smaller boats for troop transport. I have nothing on which to base an estimate of present hostile strength of troops on Luzon. However, the enemy in taking Cebu and Panay used about 10,000 men in each operation. He is now engaged in attack on Mindanao. I estimate that at least 10,000 men are engaged on Minandao

"Unless Japanese troops have been withdrawn from the Philippines I believe sufficient force is left on Luzon to undertake an operation against Corregidor . . . In my opinion the enemy is capable of making an assault on Corregidor at any time.

"Success or failure of such assault will depend entirely on the steadfastness of beach defense troops. Considering the present level of morale I estimate that we have something less than an even chance to beat off an assault. I have given you in accordance with your request a very frank and honest opinion of the situation as I see it."

It was time to see to the burning or disposal of code books and secret papers, just as I had earlier found means of doing away with, or hiding, Corregidor's wealth.

Large Store of Money

The gold reserve of the Philippines had been sent to the United States for safekeeping early in the war. But considerable wealth found its way only as far as The Rock. While the Japs framed their assault on the island I still had responsibility for $140,000,000 in Philippine currency and $15,000,000 in highly negotiable silver.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur instructed me to take down the serial numbers of the banknotes, radio the list to the treasury department in Washington, and cut up and burn the money. This we did. When the job was done and the serial numbers had been radioed, we destroyed our list of banknote numbers, as did the Honolulu relaying station which moved the numbers on to Washington. These numbers eventually reappeared on fresh Philippine bills, after the liberation — bills which had the word Victory spelled out across their backs.

Silver Hidden in Bay

The silver coins, valued at $15,000,000, presented much more of a problem. Under the direction of Gen. Moore they were sealed in wooden boxes and for three successive nights these boxes were towed out into the bay, on barges, and dropped at a carefully surveyed point between Corregidor and Fort Hughes. The location of the silver, on such notations as we were forced to make, was radioed to Washington and all documents pertaining thereto were burned.

This was not the last I was to hear of the silver. During the early days of my captivity I was constantly questioned about it. The Japs knew we had hid it in the Bay, but they never found out where it rested.

Secret Radio Reports

It took no mental giant to figure out, by May 5, 1942, that the enemy was ready to invade Corregidor. For further confirmation of my beliefs, I had a courageous Philippine army officer posted in Manila with a clandestine radio. At great risk to his life, he reported to me that the Japanese Fourth division had finished extensive landing maneuvers on the shores of Cavite, near our old naval base.

He further revealed to me that the Japs were constructing thousands of bamboo ladders at a place near Manila, to be used in scaling the more forbidding cliffs of Corregidor.

Just at dusk on one of our final evenings on The Rock an observer posted on the highest point on Corregidor reported a flotilla of small, self-propelled boats attempting to slip into Mariveles bay on the tip of Bataan. They were just clearing Langaskagayan Point when spotted.

Enemy Flotilla Routed

Our remaining three-inch guns and our single big mortar opened fire and dispersed the flotilla.

The moon was another tipoff. The four Jap attacks on my left rear flank on Bataan had come during the rise of previous full moons, which illuminated the battlefields.

The moon approached full scale during the early days of May and we knew that it was our best sign of the coming attack. Our troops along the beaches and in the ruined and half-ruined batteries were alerted.

At 8 o'clock on the night of May 5 Jap batteries on Bataan opened up furiously and shelled our entire north shore, a tremendous concentration of fire which caused many casualties and drove many defenders inland to cover.

I watched the shelling from a point near the east end of Malinta tunnel, where I had a small observation post, and then returned to my own quarters in the Tunnell, wondering and waiting.

And it was there, at 11:15 on that night of May 5, 1942, that I got the word that had to come. The phone rang and it was Gen. Moore. His voice was enough. I hardly needed his words.

"The Nips are landing out near North Point!" he said.

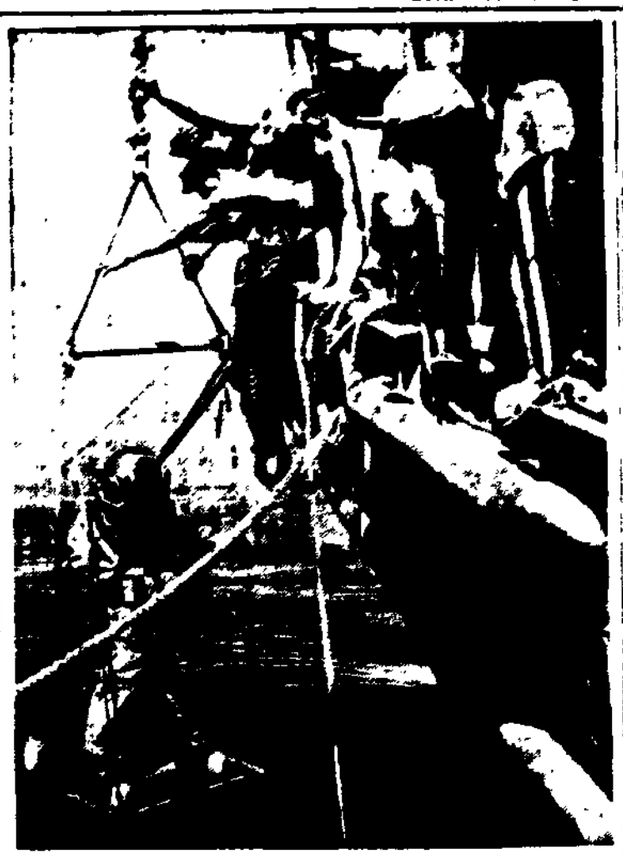
(TOMORROW: Gen. Wainwright is forced to send an offer of surrender to the Japanese.)



"I WAS CONSTANTLY QUESTIONED ABOUT THE SILVER BY THE JAPS": Gen. Wainwright writes today that the location of the silver, which his men sank in Manila Bay off Corregidor to foil the Japs, was radioed to Washington. Here Sam Black, a Navy diver, is lowered from the Navy salvage ship Teak to retrieve some of the lost treasure.

NEWS FROM OUR BOYS

Howard Clay Shelton, radioman (3-c), recently sent a copy of a story describing V-J day, written by the chaplain of the USS Deuel, a troop carrier on which he is stationed, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Shelton of Caledonia. The story stated that it was the beginning of a peaceful invasion of Japan which would have cost thousands of lives if it had been a forceful one. The bays, harbor and island were described in detail and although the view was beautiful, it became sinister when the mouths of tunnels in the cliffs for emplacements of retractable guns could be seen. The American touch was a huge sign on one building "3 cheers for U. S Navy-Army," believed to have been painted by a Marine. Shelton enlisted in the Navy shortly after his graduation from Caledonia High school in 1942 and has been overseas for almost two years.

First Lt. Matthew E. Carmean, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Carmean of Edison, was discharged recently from the Army Air corps, where he served as a medical supply officer, according to word received from the Army public relations office. He entered the service March 26, 1941, and was last stationed at Chanute Field, Ill. He was formerly employed at the Borden Dairy and Ice Cream Co. in Marion.

A letter received yesterday by Mrs. Margaret Heffelfinger informed her that her husband, S-Sgt. William C Heffelfinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Heffelfinger of South Prospect street, has recently been awarded a Jap offensive bronze star.

He left the States three months ago for overseas. Attached to the Sixth Bombardment group of the 39th Bombardment A Squadron on Tinian Island in the Mariana group, he has served as a master gunner on a B-29 Super Fortress, "Forever Amber No. 2."

His wife has been making her home in Columbus in his absence and is now visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. Herman Feidner on Cummin avenue.

John J. Liming, boatswain's mate, second class, of Route 4, Kenton, is serving aboard the USS Hampton which helped in the occupation of northern Japan, according to word received from the Navy News service. The first wave of troops to hit the beaches of Aomori were carried ashore in landing craft of the Hampton, which also sent ashore a Navy beach party to assist in preparing the area for occupation.

Pvt. Richard Moore was recently transferred from Buckingham Field, Fla., to Craig Field, Ala., and spent a 15-day furlough here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Moore of 213 South High street. He will be assigned to permanent duty there. Pvt. Moore entered the Air Corps Feb. 6 of this year.

Roy A. Haubert, radarman (3-C) arrived Monday night, after approximately 20 months overseas service, to spend a 36-day leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Haubert of 568 Silver street.

He recently served aboard the destroyer, USS Moale, as she entered Tokyo Bay, to participate in the occupation of Japan. At the expiration of his leave, he will report to San Pedro, Calif., for shipment to the Pacific, where he will resume his duties in occupation work.

Radarman Haubert enlisted in June 1943 and received radar training at Pearl Harbor, advance training at Norfolk, Va., and was graduated from torpedo school in Chicago, before going overseas. He holds the purple heart which he was awarded for a hand injury received Dec. 15 of last year in action on Mindoro Island. The destroyer saw action at Luzon, Leyte, Mindoro, Lingayen, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and in carrier raids in Tokyo.

S. Outlines Methods for Vets Buy Surplus War Property

To Veterans: The Surplus Property Administration has prepared material which soon will be handed ney leave separation centers. It tells in simple hat veterans must do to buy surplus property. ated Press is distr buting this material for the benemore than 4,000,000 men discharged before this became available. It will be distributed in four . This is the first. You may find t useful to aterial from day to day and paste it in a notebook.

an who wants to buy roperty (other than real should go to the nearest fice of the Smaller War poration.

should furnish the corpora- h full information as to e wants At the same time d produce his discharge or terminal leave papers or other evidence that he is a veteran

When the Smaller War Plants Corporation finds the veteran is eligible to make the purchase he desires, the corporation gives him a certificates or certificates describing the kind and amount of property which he has a preference to buy. It then directs him to the disposal agency which has that kind of property for sale.

If the property he wants is not in surplus stock at the time he should let the SWPC know that fact. The SWPC will make every effort to get it for him as soon as possible. If he asks it to, the SWPC may act as his agent in making purchases

There's A Catch

The veteran cannot always buy as little or as much as he wants The government cannot go into the retail business. It cannot, for instance, break up a tool kit to sell the veteran a hammer It may not be able even to sell him just one tool kit. Furthermore it must consider other veterans who may want to buy the same article he does. When supplies are limited, every effort will be made to insure fair distribution.

A veteran is allowed, when stocks are available, to buy the equipment and stock he needs to get started, including goods bought for resale. But he cannot replenish his stock by further purchases on the same terms as other citizens.

The government will not back a veteran in business but it will under certain conditions, arrange for him to buy goods on credit.

In fixing prices, condition of the property will be taken into consideration. The veteran cannot be charged more than the lowest price which is offered to anyone else at the time of his purchase

Gets Land Elsewhere

If a veteran wants to buy land or real property classified as suitable for agricultural, residential or small business purposes, he does not apply to the SWPC

If it is agricultural property he wants, he applies directly to the department of agriculture If it is grazing property, to the Department of the Interior, and if it is housing property, to the National Housing agency. Industrial real property is sold by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation

The preference on real property has to be exercised within ninety days after published notice is given that the property is to be disposed of. After the ninety-day period has run out, the disposal agency may permit offers to be made on a priority basis but is not required to.

A veteran who wishes to buy a farm or other real estate may do so after the property has been split up into what are deemed to be the right-sized units.

The veteran may apply for the purchase of any or all of these units. But he should bear in mind that he can purchase only one such unit under his veterans' preference If more than one veteran seeks the same piece of property, lots will be drawn to see who gets it.

Surplus Property Disposal Agencies

Following are disposal agencies for surplus government property and the things they handle. Nimble Jap Girls Are Natural Jitterbuggers, Declares Yank

By HAL BOYLE
AP News Feature Writer

TOKYO, Oct. 24—An American Air Force sergeant, who is teaching jitterbug to professional Japanese dancing girls, says these slue-eyed, but nimble-legged beauties are quicker to learn boogie than girls back home.

"They are crazy about jitterbugging," said Sgt. Harris Rosedale, Cincinnati dancing instructor who for more than a week has been teaching American dance routines to 40 Japanese chorus girls.

Hal Boyle

Their first show will be before a Japanese audience, but later they hope to dance at American soldier entertainments. Rosedale won't get to see them because his orders to return home are in.

"They are naturals at jitterbugging," said the sergeant, "better than American girls. They would rather do tap dancing than anything in the world.

"You show them a routine once and they can follow through right away. They will knock the G.I.s right out of their seats."

Chorus girls in Tokyo range in age from 16 to 21 and have to rehearse new numbers after going through two or three shows a day.

They only get 80 yen a month—that is a little over $5.

"I don't know how they live," Rosedale said "they must come from good families and dance for the fun of it.

Despite their small and stocky stature—G.I.s joke that "You can run over Japanese girls in a jeep without mussing their hair"—they are agile from years of ballet dancing and easily learn new rhythms.

Persons back home who oppose jitterbugging might be interested to know that at first Japanese chorus girls refused to practice some steps in the belief they were immoral.

Had To Be Convinced

As soon as they were told such dancing was conventional in America, they enthusiastically adopted it.

Rosedale tried to have them rehearse in dancing shorts, believing they would be more comfortable, but the girls thumbed down this proposal as immodest. They rehearse in trousers and sweaters.

I asked two of these girls how they like American jitterbug and boogie.

Toshi, who is an experienced dancer 20 years old, is one of the outstanding members of the troupe.

"We like all American dances—they are so swift and exciting, and the music is fast too—not like ballet," she said.

"They really pick it up fast," said Sgt. Charles A. Helmer, Mobile, Ala., musician. "They surprised me and G.I.'s will go wild to see some honest to God boogie jitterbugging again."

"There is no doubt they have got real talent for it," said Sgt. Jimmy Johnson, Detroit, Mich., dancer, "but they have had a good solid ballet foundation you wouldn't expect. Before long all young folks in Japan will be jitterbugging."

Only the Strong Can Be Free

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, as he was expected to do, has opened a full-dress public debate on the nation's postwar security by recommending a comprehensive program of military training for American men from 18 to 20.

The President's case is based squarely on the fundamental proposition of security in 1945 and for all time to come—that new implements of mechanized warfare have destroyed "geographical security" and the void must be filled by the United States with measures of preparedness hitherto considered unnecessary.

The means proposed by Mr. Truman are those submitted recently by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, in his report to the secretary of war. They consist of a trained civilian reserve, a strengthened National Guard and a relatively small professional force. Beyond that, they consist of all known means of maintaining the highest possible potentialities of military strength in terms of industrial production, national health, economic resiliency, scientific alertness and international information.

At the outset of the debate, unfortunately, there is danger that our preoccupation with the issue over military training may exclude proper attention to these other things without which the nation cannot be prepared. At the beginning of World War II, France had an abundance of trained manpower, but had almost none of the other things needed to make its manpower effectual in an emergency. Mere military training is not enough.

THE proposition submitted by President Truman will be subject in the forthcoming national debate over postwar military policy to two kinds of rebuttal.

The first kind is already familiar. It will employ the same arguments used in 1919-20—arguments that stressed everything which was calculated to weaken the case for military training. It will be pointed out that there is no likely enemy in sight, that there already are great numbers of young men trained in the art of war and that to adopt military training during negotiations for cooperative security would amount to a denial of faith in world peace. There will be the same appeals to the traditional reluctance of Americans to permit anything to interfere with their traditional freedom as individuals. There will be, no doubt, objections to the high cost of military training and the possibility of undue domination by government over the minds of impressionable youth. This type of rebuttal is obvious and temptingly easy to use; it springs naturally from the emotions.

The second type of rebuttal will be less popular and may be ignored. It attempts at least to be logical and to present an alternative to the specific proposition of the debate. Instead of concentrating on what is wrong with that proposition, it goes beyond destructive criticism and presents a constructive alternative.

It aims to give the nation a choice between two affirmative proposals, instead of between one proposal to do something and another proposal to do nothing. That was the great error the United States made after World War I, when it rejected all major proposals to do something affirmative about its own and international security and then settled down complacently in the belief that nothing would happen because it had decided nothing could happen. It is forgotten now, but if anyone had suggested in 1920 that in two decades the nations would be embroiled in another and greater war than the one just ended the suggestion would have been considered absurd.

OUR choice in 1945 and the years immediately ahead is not between preparedness to acquit ourselves of the responsibilities earned by America's part in destroying the latest plot to conquer the world and lack of preparedness. There must be no illusions about that. The decision is not between something and nothing. It is between something and something else. President Truman, drawing on the acknowledged expertness of Gen. Marshall, has submitted a plan. The only legitimate purpose of the debate thus precipitated is to decide between the government's recommendations and some other recommendations. Those with nothing to offer but destructive criticism have no right to be in the debate at all. They have no plan for the United States other than a plan of do-nothingness.

The United States is about to decide what it intends to do about the momentous events that have delivered it into the greatest potential destiny ever reached by a civilization. We can accept our obligations and prepare to fulfill them. Or we can deny them again, as we did 25 years ago, and await the ultimate attempt of some lesser power or combination of powers to take advantage of our weakness. Vastly more than the question of military training is going to be answered: it is only one part of the greater question of what America will do with its responsibility as the strongest single member of the United Nations.

The world, says Washington, has nothing to fear from the United States in the matter of the atom bomb. Until stalled reconversion gets moving, no one need worry about us but us.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

Clear Picture of Nazi Leaders.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 — The first studied picture of how things were run inside the madhouse of the Nazi state has been obtained by our intelligence people from captured leaders.

This clears much of the foolishness glibly aired by Hitler officers in their interviews with news reporters — or at all accounting, the statement of one Dr. Schacht does.

Schacht was the only high German who had an intelligent mind. It was he who contrived the clever financial and economic subterfuges by which Hitler built a bankrupt state into a world threat in a few years. He is Dr. Hjulmer Horace Greeley (imagine that old American journalistic middle name) Schacht. He quit Berlin when the arms expenditures started going mad at Hitler's direction, and was found interned by our invading armies.

His opinion of top Nazis:

Hitler: "I would not believe Hitler dead if he told me so himself."

Herman Goering, the fat right-hand man of Hitler: "A fool, a coward and always a liar. He was in all things ignorant, and a charlatan."

Goebbels, the propagandist: "A terrible liar but the best brain in the government, as well as a most courageous man."

Himmler, who handled the discipline through secret police, purges and terror: "A dreadful, horrible man."

Thyssen a Weakling

Thyssen, who financed Hitler into power and then broke with him when the pogrom started: "A weakling of inherited wealth." (Thyssen incidentally was captured by Hitler in the occupation of Paris in 1940 and was kept in a concentration camp, where our people found him a very old and frail man.)

Schacht, I think, gives the goods on the Nazi leaders more honestly and accurately than any other one. Of the limitations of Hitler's mind, he says der fuehrer never realized the war was lost, although the others realized it a year or more before the end.

Hitler never dared hold a cabinet meeting after 1938 because those with intelligence in his own group constantly opposed his wild planning. General Udet, for one instance, dared express opposition merely to the Goering short-sighted air policy, and after correctly predicting Goering would lose German air superiority by 1944, shot himself.

They were all very ordinary men, less than average in acumen and warped bitterly and egotistically. The only way they could keep themselves in power to work their mad destiny was by crushing all common sense and stilling any voice of reason. Not one in character, foresight or any genuine virtue, could compare with the great men of history.

From Schacht also comes the first clear picture of secret German finance, the bookkeeping magic by which the Nazis defied arithmetic—for a time. He says Hitler started really arming for the war first in 1937 and 1938 when his budgets contained three billion marks (both years) for armaments. This was at the time when Mr. Roosevelt was submitting amiable plans for world peace and thinking the removal of trade barriers would do it.

Value of Mark

The Swiss quotation on the mark then was around three cents, which would mean the annual arms budget was around $90,000,000 in our currency—two-fifths of which went for the air force then, as thereafter, until the end of the war. The money was raised by bond issues bearing 3½ per cent interest and the banks were required to take them.

Schacht protested to Hitler in 1938 that the system he had set up to beat bankruptcy could not stand such expenditures, and after a couple of scenes with Hitler, he quit. The amount of currency outstanding then was only eight billion marks, but thereafter Hitler inflated it 10 times to 80,000,000,000 marks.

The debt when Schacht left was around 90 billion marks and Hitler ran it up to 450 billions at the war's end, quintupling it. This would seem to make the Nazi war cost around 430 billion marks, of which about 70 billions was raised by inflation, and 360 billion by seizing the savings and working money of citizens through bond issues imposed on the banks.

At a three cent mark, the cost could be computed roughly at somewhere around $12,900,000,000, a drop in the bucket of our cost, which has increased the debt from about $250,000,000,000, without considering tax receipts which reached $45,000,000,000 last year. Of course Hitler was not required to finance the world, and gave little aid even to his ally, Italy.

The lesson which can be learned from the sound Schacht evidence is twofold:

(A) Nazidom shows what defective mentalities can do when they attain absolute power and exclude reason.

(B) You cannot long cheat arithmetic even in a controlled state.

The Unrest in Argentina

By Paul Sanders

NEW YORK—If anyone can tell Argentina—richest and most literate of South American nations—how long it will take to clean up her confused mess, she'd like to know it.

Democratic President Juan Antonio Rios of Chile—Argentina's western neighbor—says that the Rio de la Plata republic is suffering from a serious illness which she, and she alone, can cure.

The basic illness of the country is nationalistic military dictatorship, complicated in recent years by Nazi-Fascist trimmings.

But whether Argentina would get back to normal quickly if the army were to hand power to civilians is conjectural.

For many years the country has had a notable lack of outstanding leaders or cohesion in the civilian political parties. Many Argentines fear that they don't have a man who could command nationwide respect.

The Nazi-Fascist symptoms coincident with the military dictatorship alarmed many people inside and outside Argentina, but the country's troubles are basically home grown.

These troubles have come in spite of the democratic sentiments of a great majority of the Argentina people, who are mostly of Spanish and Italian stock, with a mixture of German, Polish, Irish, English, Swiss, Dutch, Hungarian, Belgian and French.

Yawn At Politics

They are among the best fed people in the world, and most of them live comfortably — which may explain in part why, unless things get very bad, Argentines are inclined to yawn at politicians. They want democracy but they usually don't do much about it.

Typical of the confusion currently is the labor movement, which has been split wide open by Col Juan Domingo Peron, the off-again, on-again strong man behind the military dictatorship. By decreeing compulsory wage increases, by lowering rents and working hours by decree, by selecting and building up friends in the labor movement, Peron won considerable support in the unions. He has been telling labor that he is giving it a New Deal.

Many Argentines say that a majority of labor is opposed to Peron, but that he is able to engineer a demonstration or strike in his favor at any time.

Argentina's difficulties find their roots in many local factors:

Political activity by army officers, for years trained by German missions. Many Argentine officers studied in Germany, absorbed the psychology of the German general staff. Few Argentine army officers knew American or British democracy, or American industrial strength.

A preponderance of the nation's wealth, population and production is concentrated in Buenos Aires and its immediate territory, which means that whoever controls the city controls the nation. This factor plays into the hands of Army politicians. The only important military force is concentrated at Campo de Mayo, 25 miles from the capital.

If army officers decide to change government policy, or take power, they need merely threaten to march on the city. There is no other military strength within hundreds of miles, and the distant garrisons are weak and ineffective.

Argentines remember, too, the nation's early record of repeated civil wars, and the delay of contending factions in accepting the principle of majority rule for many years after independence was won from Spain in 1810.

They recall the long-standing struggle for control between rich and progressive Buenos Aires and the more conservative provinces, the long struggle over what form of federal union was to be established before a constitution finally was drawn up and ratified in 1853.

That constitution — modeled after that of the United States—was adopted at a time when the country was contrite and exhausted after more than 20 years of the most brutal dictatorship the country ever experienced.

The dictator, Juan Manuel Rosas, suppressed civil liberties, jailed, executed or exiled oppositionists, sent goon squads prowling Buenos Aires to hunt out enemies.

Road To Progress

After Rosas, the trend was more and more to stability and progress.

In the 50 years up to 1930, the country had established a reputation as a modern, progressive, cultured country—an enlightened, democratic nation.

But Argentina slipped backward in 1930 and has floundered ever since. The Rosas influence had not died.

The country's dominant political party, the Radical Civic Union (centrist) had split wide open on charges of graft and personal rather than party rule by aged President Hipolito Irigoyen.

Depression unemployment intensified general dissatisfaction and prompted an army march from Campo de Mayo which unseated Irigoyen and installed Gen. Jose Francisco Uriburu as provisional president.

The military revolution, and its promises of reform, was greeted by cheering crowds unaware of what the army men really intended.

Uriburu allowed a local Fascist organization to get a foothold, but opinion against army rule was strong enough to force him to call elections in 1931. A moderate, Gen. Agustin Justo, was the army candidate.

Justo had a stormy term, but moved toward normality by making Roberto Ortiz, a liberal businessman, his candidate in the 1937 presidential elections. To satisfy extreme conservatives Justo put Ramon S. Castillo—a narrow provincial nationalist—up for vice president.

Ortiz-Castillo won amid Radical union and Socialist charges of a frame up, but things went smoothly for a time. Then the President fell ill, and Castillo became acting president.

Prodded by army officers who admired Nazi "efficiency" and who believed that Germany would win the war, Castillo set a neutrality policy the day after Pearl Harbor, and allowed Nazi espionage and influences to continue unchecked. Ortiz favored the United Nations, but was too ill to count, and died several months later.

Castillo suspended civil liberties and used force to keep dissatisfaction with his policies from getting out of hand. Democratic Argentines found Castillo unsatisfactory on all counts.

After he handpicked a candidate for the scheduled 1943 elections, the army timed a march from Campo de Mayo with a period of bitter anti-government feeling.

That army march, in June, 1943, ousted Castillo, and put a general in charge. The 1943 march—like that 13 years earlier—was greeted with applause. Thousands of Argentines again had confused the meaning of events.

But it became clear that the real ruler was Peron, leader of a group of ardent nationalists whose newspaper eulogized Rosas, Hitler and Mussolini.

He made the government a strong-arm affair which set up a Gestapo, crushed all forms of expression, wooed labor, and even played up to local Communists by trying to enter into negotiations for establishment of relations with Moscow.

The army threw Peron out of his posts of vice president and labor minister in maneuvering which wasn't quite clear, after anti-government demonstrations by students and thousands of others.

Then Peron quickly re-established his influence.

Elections were set for next April 7 in the interval between Peron's real or synthetic slump and his quick bounce back to power.

Whether Peron is still around on election day and whether there are other candidates, remains to be seen.

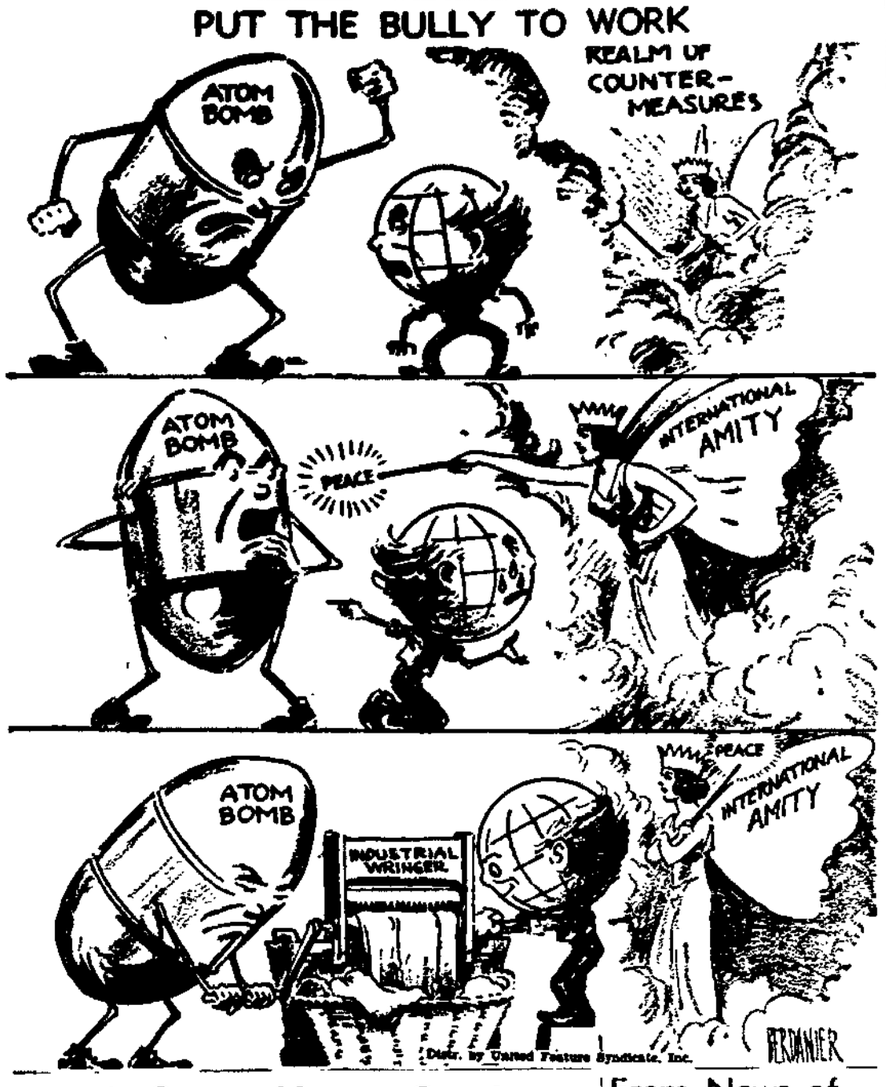
PUT THE BULLY TO WORK



Red Cross Home Service

By Herman R. Allen

WASHINGTON — Three of the veteran's fingers and half his hand had been blown off. They told him when he was discharged from Walter Reed hospital that the other finger might have to be amputated and a mechanical hand fitted.

He got a job but couldn't hold it with his bunged-up hand. He got another, had to quit—another, and had to quit that too. He was getting $23 a month disability pension, was apparently entitled to more but had to wait while wheels turned at the Veterans Administration. His case was delayed at the Unemployment Compensation office.

Broke, hungry, homeless, he heard about Red Cross Home Service. Home Service fixed him up with meals and a room and a little cash until things started breaking his way.

Another man, badly disfigured by combat injuries, refused the pleas of his family to return home. The family got in touch with Home Service, which sent a case worker to loo't him up.

An interview disclosed that it was not the man's disfigurement that stopped him from going home. It was the fear that he wouldn't be able to find a job he could handle. He had been trained as an architect, but the depression had prevented him from working at it very much before he went into military service.

The Red Cross case worker took the unusual step of requesting a Washington architect to place the men in a branch office in his home town. Usually Home Service sends a man to see a veterans representative at the U. S. Employment Office.

Aid for Families

Home Service was originally set up to help a service man handle problems that arose at home while he was away. A mother had to go to the hospital, and Home Service arranged for the care of her children. A wife was without money when her husband's allotment check was late, and Home Service loaned her enough to get by.

A soldier was notified of a serious illness at home. He applied for a furlough, and his commanding officer asked Home Service to make the necessary check-up so that the furlough could be granted.

More and more, however, Home Service is swinging into the job of helping veterans make a smooth return to civilian life. It figures that if it takes a year to make a civilian into a soldier, it must take at least that long to make him into a civilian again.

The local Washington office of Home Service has been handling about 7,000 cases a month during the war. In July 784 of these involved veterans' problems. Now such cases are running about 1,000 a month.

One of Home Services most touching problems is that of the young man who has never held a job or moved in the adult civilian world. Some of these young men have lived for four or even five years in an atmosphere of danger and excitement. Their lives have been governed in general by regulations and in particular by commands.

To enter a humdrum civilian existence, with a speeding auto perhaps the greatest danger, is not attractive to some. When that is coupled with the fact that for the first time it will be necessary to make the major decisions that mean livelihood, the gap is just a little more than some can face calmly.

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Thursday, Oct. 24, 1935.

President Roosevelt returned to the White House after a month's cruise in Pacific and Atlantic waters.

The state supreme court refused to grant a writ ordering Governor Davey to call a special election to choose a successor to the late Charles V. Truax of Sycamore, Democratic congressman-at-large from Ohio.

Three truck loads of pumpkins raised in the city gardens on the airport were distributed to relief families at the city barns.

Thirteen entries were filed for the annual Marion county corn husking contest. Entered in the shock corn contest were Ralph Augenstein and Dan Miller of Waldo, Elmer Leathem and Ralph Roesch of Martel, and C. Perry of Kirkpatrick. Standing corn entries were filed by Paul Kleffman of LaRue, Earl Speece, Ira Disterdick, and Paul Lemke of Kirkpatrick, George Smith of Waldo and Curtis Gibson, Walter Nailer and William Lemke of Marion. The contest was to be held the following Saturday on the Harry Key farm near Claridon.

The WPA office announced that five projects employing 85 persons and costing $19,894 were ready to get under way. The projects including painting in the courthouse, school repairs, removal of street car rails.

A jury in common pleas court found Dominic Spaigiani guilty of murder in the second degree in the dime poker bet slaying of Jess Yoder.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Saturday, Oct. 24, 1925.

Marion grocers and meat dealers voiced opinion that food prices had reached their peak here and that living costs would decline perceptibly even during the winter. Material reductions in the price of clothing also were forecast.

Will Rogers in his weekly letter gave most of his comment to Henry Ford's purchase of the D. T. & I. railroad. He said, "Mr. Ford knows more human nature than any business man living. He knows the American people want to be going somewhere and they don't care where, just so they are going". So, he said, referring to the D. T. & I., "Here is the very thing for them. They can be going somewhere and they, me, or nobody else will know where."

A news dispatch reported that Lakewood's new high school, one of the largest and best equipped in northern Ohio, had been named in honor of President Warren G. Harding. In further honor of President Harding, the school named its publication "The Harding Star."

Toast at a Fleet Review

To hell and back, to hell and back:
On daily trips, the Jap to smack;
Four years the champ of seas and skies
The gallant old gal, Enterprise!

You need merely to observe the sailors back from intrepid feats in the Pacific, with death at their side every minute, to realize that at last they have met something that scares them: City traffic.

"Boy!" exclaimed a fighting man right off the battered Enterprise today, "I know what them kamizake fliers are doin' now. They're driving taxis in America!"

Desire Number One

What does a sailor want the most,
Back from the wars to his native coast?
Cheers and parades and some speeches strange?
Merely a phone-booth...and five-cents change!

Relaxation

By Truman Twitt

There seems to be more talk than usual lately about relaxation. There is an obvious explanation for this. After the sustained tension of war, a lot of us realize relaxation is imperative. Either we must discover how to relax, or the men in the white truck will come to get us before our time.

The trouble is that by the time relaxation becomes an emergency proposition, it already may be too late. Relaxation can cure, but it works best as a preventive. The fortunate person is the one who knows how to stay relaxed, without a trip to the doctor's office to learn that it's time to ease off the tension.

In this connection, the doctors themselves are an interesting crowd to watch. There is probably no single group in the country that was more overworked during the war than doctors. They had it 24 hours every day, 365 days a year. Some of them have cracked up in the process, but on the whole they have seemed to survive the grind with remarkably good results. Is it possible that most doctors know how to practice what they preach?

We suspect they do—and we suspect we know how they do it. In the nature of their work, doctors meet their problems one at a time and cross no bridges until the bridges have been reached. A few weeks ago we called professionally on an overworked general practitioner. His waiting room was jammed. His office girl was doing triple duty as receptionist, telephone operator and traffic cop, and she was showing the strain.

But when our turn came to be ushered into the inner sanctum, there sat the doc, as easy and comfortable as an old rocker. He received our apology for taking up his time with what probably was a minor symptom and said he was glad to see us. He knew a lot of people were lined up outside, but explained he could see them only one at a time, so he wasn't worried. And surprisingly, he didn't act worried.

His composure had the same effect as a warm bath and soft music. It was a reminder of something everybody knows and almost everybody forgets—that easy does it. America has come through four years of wild-swinging and lump-swallowing. We helped win the war, not because we were tensed-up but because here and there wise men and women retained the ability to think clearly, act incisively, and keep their composure and sense of proportion.

Our duty now is to follow their good example into the postwar era—to learn the secret of tackling one thing at a time and to forego the lethal temptation to let ourselves get tied in knots about problems created by overanxious and hysterical people who are tied in knots.

Name of Rover Goes To the Dogs

By The Associated Press

AUFORA, Ill.—Rover is losing its punch as a name for dogs, a survey of the city clerk's records shows. Only one Rover was found among the 850 licensed dogs in this community.

Most popular is Skippy, with the variations of Skipper and Skip, followed by the old and enduring favorites Laddie, Spot and Pal.

Other names, reflecting influence or imitation of one sort or another, include Fido, Goofy, Bambi, Dopey, Sarge, Captain, Navy, Pooch, Bum, Falla and Hedy.

Kansas accounts for one-seventh of the flour production of the United States, which totals over 250,000,000 sacks per year.

JAPAN STUDIES TRUSTS, FOOD

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Oct. 24—Directors of Japan's biggest multi-million dollar family monopoly, prodded by the stigma of being linked with the war effort, wrestled today with reorganization — while the harrassed government prepared to beg for outside aid to meet a food crisis

The problem before the directors of Mitsui, a company dating back to 1673, was what to do with holdings frowned on under the present setup by General MacArthur

Food Is Big Problem

The problem before Welfare Minister Hitoshi Ashida was how to feed the people through November and December until transportation deficiencies are overcome to permit adequate distribution of the currently harvested rice crop Ashida said his government plans to negotiate with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration

American occupation interest was focused on the visit of a War Department official from Washington Little was being said about the conferences of John J McCloy, assistant secretary of war, although these already have included a meeting with MacArthur.

McCloy may have brought word on the oft-rumored possibility of MacArthur making his first visit to the United States since before the war Or he may have discussed the forthcoming participation of Russian, British, Australian and Chinese troops in the occupation

Ashes of Prisoners from Jap Temples Flown Back to U. S.

By The Associated Press

ENROUTE FROM TOKYO TO MANILA, Oct 24 — The 14 wooden boxes were stacked neatly in the aisle of the plane Some were the size of orange crates Others were larger, or smaller

Thirty passengers, mostly headed homeward, were aligned along the walls in seats of the big four-motored C-54 transport.

"Do you know those boxes have a No 2 priority out of Tokyo, and that when we get to Manila, where more planes are available, they will have a No 1 priority all the way to the States?" asked a crew member

"I bet some of these passengers wouldn't be so comfortable if they knew what was in them It's listed on the manifest—ashes of 1,091 former prisoners of war. That lieutenant is in charge of them"

A bit reluctantly, Second Lt Roy Carter, Port Huron, Mich, talked about the boxes containing earthen jars Over half of the 1,091 were Americans Most of the remainder were Dutch There were seven Italians and one Norwegian

Carter said

"Most of them were fellows captured at the start of the war in the Philippines, East Indies and Malaya. Most of them died long ago, although there were some B-29 fliers who died within the last year.

"This is the first shipment of ashes from Japan to the United States, I am informed But it is just the beginning. All of these jars were on shelves in just one temple—at Osaka. There were others all over Japan" sentenced him to death for his puppet role, but his doom actually was sealed with the collapse of German military might.

On May 9 he drove to the Oslo police station in a bullet-proof limousine and surrendered He was arraigned on a charge of treason

Charges Outlined

His trial began Aug 20 before three judges and four laymen The prosecution accused him of conferring with German officials months before the invasion, urging them to such action Subsequently, it was charged, he delivered defense data to the Germans and aided their occupation of Norway by urging her troops not to resist.

He was accused also of collaborating with the Nazis in deportations and oppressions that led to deaths of hundreds of Jews and patriots.

Quisling's defense was that he acted solely to advance Norway's interests in a German-dominated Europe.

On Sept. 10 the court decreed him guilty and ordered his death before a firing squad.

Farm Youth Raises Ton Litter in Marion C. of C. Pig Project

The Marion Chamber of Commerce program for improving hog production in the county paid good dividends this fall when James Conley of near Morral produced a ton litter from one of the gilts.

The Conley gilt was one of six young sows placed with Marion county farm boys last fall. Conley is president of the Morral chapter of the Future Farmers of America

To qualify for ton litter honors the litter of one sow must weigh a ton or more at six months of age

Litter Weighed 2216 Pounds

Official final weighing on Sept. 29 showed a total weight of 2216½ pounds for the eleven pigs raised, an average of 202½ pounds per pig. The pigs are purebred Hampshires The gilt was purchased by the Chamber of Commerce in the fall of 1944 from Luther Mitchell & Son of east of Marion and furnished to Conley

In addition to producing the ton litter Conley's sow was placed first in the Chamber of Commerce show held early in September at the Marion county fair, and four of her pigs were winners in the F. F A. division of the Marion county junior fair. On Oct 12 she farrowed another litter of 15 pigs, 12 of which are still living

The Chamber of Commerce committee in charge of the pig program was scheduled to meet at the Y. M C. A. today to approve applications of young farmers for applications in the gilt program next year.

When the gilts are turned over to the boys they agree to raise the sow under sanitary condition, feed a balanced ration and to show the sow and litter at the Marion county fair. As payment for their gilt and to keep the Chamber of Commerce program going the boys also agree to furnish the committee with a market hog weighing approximately 200 or give the committee the choice of any young sow in the litter.

May Change Rules

Members of the committee indicated today that the rules may be changed next year to give the committee the choice of two gilts from each litter at 12 weeks of age. This change is considered to give the boys the responsibility and experience of raising the gilt from shortly after farrowing to maturity.

Committee members said today one other boy has a chance of equaling Conley's record this year He is Tom Stayner of east of Marion who has a spotted Poland China sow from the herd of George Cochran of south of Marion.

Other boys participating in the program are Edwin Denman of near LaRue, Poland China from the herd of Judge Paul D. Smith, Lowell Hedges, Hampshire from the Luther Mitchell herd, Norman Withrow of south of Agosta, Duroc from the John Clark farm; and Herbert Thieken of southeast of Waldo, with a Luther Mitchell Hampshire.

Russia Tightens Grasp on Europe, in Hitler Style

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

There's this to be said of Russia, and we shall be smart to note it well. When the Muscovites have determined on a major objective, they drive headon for it

That characteristic is illustrated in the Soviet action in proposing to conclude unilateral trade pacts with the Axis satellites Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria — a move which Britain and the United States have protested as violating the spirit of the Yalta agreement for concerted policies among the Big Three The significance of this development seems clear enough, and it supports the thesis advanced in this column long ago:

D. Mackenzie

Moscow has laid out for its sphere of influence virtually the whole of eastern and central Europe up to the line running from the great German port of Stettin on the Baltic right down to the Adriatic. Just have a look at your maps. Within this zone is the new Poland, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Finland and the Balkans, with the possible exception of Greece and Turkey, whose status remains to be seen.

The Soviet is determinedly consolidating this vast territory.

Now this isn't a new phenomenon As this writer has mentioned in previous articles, Russia is taking over the Hitlerian sphere of influence Germany's strength was politico-economic, backed by military power. Moscow's strength lies in similar factors.

Depended on Reich

Much of the Reich's pre-war domination was due to the economic hold which it exercised over that whole area Indeed, broadly speaking, this was Germany's main strength. The smaller countries in question were economically dependent on the Reich.

Take Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria—since these are the countries in the lime-light. More than fifty per cent of all their exports were absorbed by Germany. And they had no alternative markets! There's a situation for you—no alternative markets.

The position was crisply summed up for me in Budapest just before the war by a famous Hungarian statesman. We were chatting in his study and, after calling attention to the fact that more than half Hungary's exports went to Germany and that there were no other markets, he added:

"All Hitler would have to do would be to cut off our exports to Germany for six months and we would be bankrupt. Do you think we are going to play along with him? The answer is 'Yes.'"

LONDON PARLEY STRIKES SNAG

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 24—Snagged on a question of parliamentary order the United Nations executive committee postponed today a vote on a Russian request that the nominations committee of the organization's general assembly be abolished.

The Soviet delegate, Andre. A Gromyko, reversing his stand in a sub-committee, made the proposal during discussion of a report on the general assembly Delegates interpreted this move as aimed at strengthening the proposed central committee

Postponement of the vote was preceded by a brush between the Russian and United States delegates

Adlai E Stevenson Jr., U S delegate, held the nominations committee was a means for efficient handling of elections and the only assurance of a wide geographical distribution of various committee chairmanships. After a two-hour discussion, he rephrased the question so it would have required only a simple majority to carry.

Gromyko, the Soviet ambassador to the United States, objected, insisting the question should be turned around so as to require two-thirds approval

Stevenson replied that parliamentary order required consideration of the question as he had put it.

State To Get Bids on Wyandot Co. Job

COLUMBUS, O. Oct 24—The state highway department announced today bids would be received Nov 9 on 13 new projects including four for general construction to administrative posts at training centers.

ARMY

These sources also envision a different dress uniform for the trainee force and fewer of the Army's routine chores.

Civilians should do the cooking, baking and a major part of the clerical work for the trainees, they say.

Get Some Details

However, the trainees would be taught how to take care of themselves—set up their own messes and keep their barracks clean This is part of a soldier's training

The disciplinary and courts martial systems probably would be different from the regular services

The trainees, these sources believe, should be paid—but not as much as a regular soldier or sailor. They should be given—as far as possible—their choice of services and branches.

The Army program should be divided roughly into four main phases.

(1) Basic training of about nine weeks for aviation ground forces and service forces,

(2) Period of about 13 weeks but variable, for specialist training—such as radar, radio meteorology;

(3) Prolonged training in teamwork,

(4) Four weeks of combined field exercises, a sort of top-off field maneuver, in which various units would get a workout in coordination

The training would be intensive and devoted to modern strategy and the use of the newest weapons

In addition to purely military exercises, optional educational courses are visualized for the trainee's off hours Extension courses from nearby colleges may be instituted.

There also would be emphasis on "morale" and physical training

At the end of the year, the trainees would have four choices (1) Enter a general reserve for six years In the event of war, they could be drafted on orders from congress. (2) Enlist in the Regular Army. (3) Volunteer for the National Guard or for units of the organized reserve (4) Sign up for additional training which may be made available to them.

Such additional training would be offered by the Air Corps. In his first year's training, an aviation trainee would have completed his pre-flight training and possibly have had some flight training Further work would be necessary to qualify him as a pilot, bombardier or navigator
